A feature of this important meeting is Dr. Longley's talk on chrysanthemums, with valuable tips on raising next year's blooms. Dr. Longley, assistant professor in the horticulture department at the University Farm School, is an authority on the subject. If you are interested in this gorgeous fall flower (as what gardener isn't?), his experience and background will be reflected in your own blooms if you hear and put into practice what he says. We urge that every member be present and if possible exhibit some chrysanthemums. An impressive list of awards is also a prime inducement.
